Luncheon to follow

Dear Chevrei,

After preparing the people as best he can – warning them to stay a certain distance away, and to remain ritually pure, and to bring their legal problems to Aaron, and so forth - Moses climbs Mount Sinai to receive the commandments. And he's gone awhile. Forty days. And on day 39, the Israelites panic. They've lost count. They are in the wilderness; the God with whom Moses communes is invisible, and Moses appears to have gone missing. They lose their collective cool. They confront Aaron.

Have you ever had to wait for someone or something you anticipate for a really long time? How did you feel about that? How long can you hold on to patience?

I've observed, over the past few years, that there are some things for which people seem to be able to wait forever, while other things – often things that are less consequential – for which they have little or no patience at all. And the difference, generally speaking, seems to be whether or how we are touched by the things for which we wait.

I used to be one of those antsy, hurry-it-up people when waiting in line for a gas pump, or at the bank. You know - I have things to do and people to see! But in the course of my Mussar study and practice, I am learning to grow the distance between the match and the fuse, as they put it. A few weeks ago, having run out of scrip, I was compelled to pay cash for my gas and had to wait in line at the counter. The person being serviced at the counter was making decisions about lottery tickets and other products; the server was patiently serving him. The man between us – the guy in line ahead of me – was growing fidgety. It was clear he had things to do and people to see. He was at least good-natured about the wait, on the outside – but he did start bantering about the situation with me, joking loudly about how long things were taking.

Mussar at the ready, I replied, "Man, it's not all about us." He laughed. Just like that, I had increased the distance between his match and his fuse, too.

What if? What if the Israelites had been more patient with Moses? What if Aaron had told them to cool their jets for just one more day? Perhaps the Golden Calf might have never happened, nor the bloodshed that followed when the Levites slew the leaders of the revolt.

On the other hand: there are situations with which we are entirely too patient, when we harbor the misperception that it really isn't about us.

How else to explain our utter failure, as a society, to prevent the mass shootings that plague no other country more than these United States?

How else do we account for the epidemic of STDs in Kern County? The pernicious problem of homelessness? Or the outrageously disproportionate mass incarceration of people of color?

These are very real and serious problems that ought to send us (like the students at Margery Stoneman Douglas High School) screaming to gun and ammunitions manufacturers, if not to our legislators; issues that should compel us to willingly raise our own taxes or find other ways to create and fund workable solutions. But unless you and I feel personally touched by these situations, we seem content to do the minimum and wait things out.

In our personal lives, patience is most definitely a virtue. With regard to social justice, "the day is short, and the work is much, and the workers are lazy; and the reward is great, and the Master of the house is pressing." (Pirkei Avot 2:16).

L'shalom ulivracha,

Rabbi Cheryl Rosenstein

President Elliott Magnus Perspectives

I would like to thank the Sincoff's once again for deciding to have Emily's Bat Mitzvah at Temple Beth El. The sanctuary was filled with family, friends, temple members and joy! A number of guests traveled quite some way to Bakersfield in order to share in this beautiful life event. I thank the members who came out and supported the Sincoff's, and will remind those who were not able to attend, that we have three more B'nai Mitzvah fast approaching and your attendance is welcomed and appreciated.

The next Bat Mitzvah on calendar is for Isabella Rudnick on March 30th. I know she has been studying very hard on perfecting all of her Hebrew and will do a fantastic job. I have had the pleasure of sitting on the bema when she has been a pulpit assistant and she knows her stuff. I know Josh and Edith, as well as all of the Rudnick clan will be very proud of her on that day, and encourage all members who are able to be there on this special day.

One way to make sure you do not forget to attend the Bat Mitzvah on March 30th is to come to the Purim service on March 20th, and the Purim spiel on March 24th. Please note the date for the Purim spiel falls on a Sunday night. I know it is a school night, but based on past performance of bar sales, I don't think anyone will be calling in sick anyhow.

Another reason I thought it was a great idea to move the performance back one night, is because I am the one writing it, and directing it too, I suppose. This will give me one more day of rehearsals and set creation. This year's theme is a Purim Spiel about nothing! The show will be based of Seinfeld characters and themes. I loved the show growing up and the iconic characters and episodes lend itself to the story of Esther. All of that being said, I have not kept up with the show in syndication, and my memory has faded over the last twenty years; so, if there is a particular episode or story arc you loved from Seinfeld shoot me an email or text and let me know.

Finally, it is never too soon to ask for help for the Jewish Food Festival that will be held on Sunday April 7th at Congregation B'nai Jacob. We need volunteers to work the day of the event, but most importantly we need volunteers to help with the baked goods and the chicken soup. Every time we have had the festival in the past, we have sold out of both the soup and the baked goods, so we need to make sure we have enough supply to keep up with the demand. You don't have any recipes? Not to worry, there are baking lessons on March 3rd, and March 17th at the Temple to learn the recipes and any other tips and tricks. Please contact either Jill Egland or Gail Magnus if interested, or just show up to Temple at 12:30 on those Sundays. The chicken soup is Norma Schwartz's recipe which can be found in our very own TBE cookbook volume II, or you can contact Jeff and Donna Schwartz to find out how you can contribute to our soup supply.

As you can tell we have a stuffed calendar, and this is only the half of it! Yes it is a lot of work, but it is also very fun and rewarding work. I hope you pick up the phone and call and get involved.

Our March Bat Mitzvah, Isabella Rudnick, is the beloved daughter of Joshua and Edith, and the doting owner of her dog, Ruby. A 4.0 “Principal’s List” student at Tevis Junior High, her favorite subjects are math and history – and of course, band, in which she plays trumpet. She enjoys basketball, swimming, and movies, especially The Hunger Games, the Purge series, and the Twilight Trilogy. Her future plans include a trip to Israel, and becoming a dermatologist.

If you are unable to host your scheduled night, please find a replacement; then call the office at 322-7607 so that our Shabbat Worship Service cards are updated accordingly. Reminder: Part of clean-up includes washing and putting away dishes and utensils.

Bakers Needed!!

We are in need of people who would like to learn how to make the baked goods we sell at the Jewish Food Festival, or people who would like to participate in group baking.

You may take your goods home or contribute them to the JFF. Please consider participating because it is so much more fun if we have a good turnout.

All meetings will be held immediately after religious school on Sundays. Below are the dates:

March 3 Mandel Brot
March 17 Challah and Sour Cream Coffee Cake

Please contact either Marsha Parr or Gail Magnus to let us know that you will participate is important, so that we have the correct amount of ingredients for everyone

Jewish tradition prescribes that a meal be provided for the family following the burial of a family member. To that end the Caring Committee of Temple Beth El is prepared to provide a Meal of Condolence for temple families who experience the loss of a loved one. Please consider making a donation in memory of your loved one to the Caring Committee so that we may continue to provide this Mitzvah to others!
